Explanatory Statement.

To My Kinsfolk, Descendants of Ezra Earll and his Wife, Mary Sabin: After the compilation and publication in 1901 of the pamphlet entitled, "Cromwell's Lake and the Heirs of Ezra Earll," my attention was drawn to early New England records showing that our ancestor John Earll, 2nd, was the husband of Mary Wilcox, daughter of David Wilcox and his wife Mary Cooke; and that through her we are descended from three of the Mayflower founders of New England, two of whom were signers of the famous compact recognized by students of American history as the actual basis of our Republican form of government.

The more prominent events in the lives of these our Pilgrim sires and their worthy sons are matters of public record, and were long since combined into most interesting and instructive biographical sketches, which are a legitimate part of our family history.

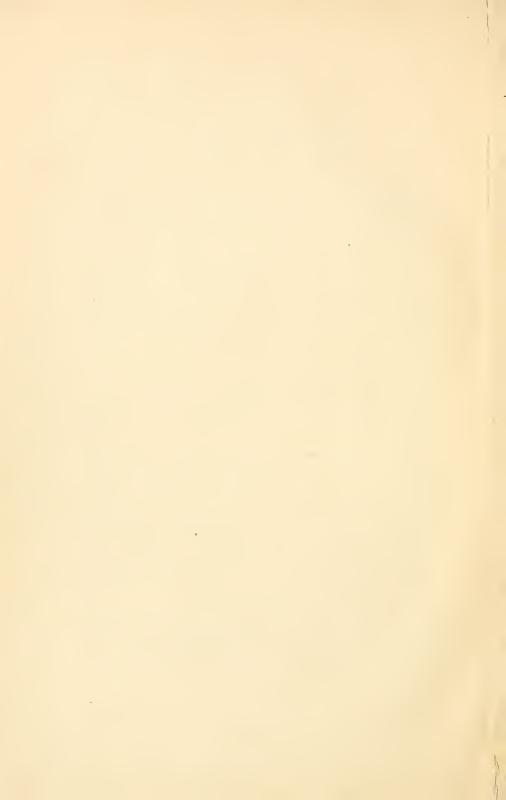

While the data contained in the pamphlet mentioned more than met the legal requirements which called it into existence, its value as a family history would have been greatly increased had the genealogical tables it contained, instead of ending with the names of the heirs-in-law of Ezra Earll and Mary Sabin, been so extended as to embrace all of their living descendants.

The knowledge that one has behind him a long line of honored, liberty-loving and patriotic sires, most assuredly tends to increase his self-respect and love of country, and thereby improves his standing as an American citizen.

For the reasons stated I have deemed it worth while to publish in durable form this second and enlarged record of the ancestors and descendants of Ezra Earll and Mary Sabin.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES.

Francis Cooke, 1577-1653, the seventh signer of the Mayflower Compact, was a native of Schrooby, once the hunting seat of the Archbishop of York. The palace there is described as a pretentious structure, which had two court yards, and was surrounded by a moat. The ancestors of the Cookes are said to have been Romanists, and there is some uncertainty as to date on which Francis Cooke espoused the doctrines of the Separatists. His name appears in the list of those designated "Exiles from Schrooby." Having worshiped with Brewster and Bradford there, he went with them to Holland, reaching Leyden in 1600. At Levden he became an inmate of the home of Pastor Robinson, whose large house was also a place of worship. Among those who regularly attended service there was Hester the walloon, who later became the wife of Francis Cooke. Hester Cooke did not accompany her husband to Plymouth, but came about two years later in the ship Ann. house at Plymouth was on Leyden Street, adjoining that of Edward Winslow.

Francis Cooke is described by one of his biographers as "a man of sound judgment, of decisive, though not arbitrary action, who could see both sides of any question even when the necessity of action or conviction might be against his interest." In 1634 he was chosen a referee in settlement of various affairs between members of the colony. His death in 1653 was regarded an irreparable loss by his townsmen.

JOHN COOKE, about 1612-1695; oldest son of Francis Cooke and his wife Hester, came to Plymouth with his father on the Mayflower in 1620. His extreme youth is emphasized by a passage in the early records, which states that "he was led ashore by his father's hand."

On March 28, 1634, he was married to SARAH WARREN, daughter of Richard Warren and his wife Elizabeth. He resided for a number of years in that section of Plymouth known as Rocky Nook. On June 7, 1637, he volunteered to serve in the Pequot war on condition that provision be made for the care of his family during his absence. He was a member of the Plymouth Military Company in 1643, and a representative of Plymouth in the General Assembly of Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1638-9, from 1641 to 1644, in 1647, and from 1653 to 1656. Plymouth Church made him one of her deacons, but disagreeing with the pastor, Rev. John Raynor, upon theological issues, and with others of the colony with reference to the persecution of the Quakers, to removed to Dartmouth, of which he was one of the first purchasers. He was a selectman there in 1670, from 1672 to 1673, in 1675, and from 1679 to 1683. He was also the representative of that town in the General Court from 1666 to 1668, from 1673 to 1675, from 1679 to 1682, and in 1686. He was one of the company that built "the first vessel of the colony—the forty-ton leviathan of the deep, the pride and delight of Plymouth." He was also largely interested in the first ferry that plied between Dartmouth and Rhode Island. About the time of his settlement at Dartmouth he openly espoused the religious principles advocated by Roger Williams and Obadiah Holmes, and was for many years a minister in the Baptist denomination. He died at Dartmouth November 23, 1695, the last male survivor of the Mavflower. His unmarked grave is at Oxford, the upper village of the town. His will, executed November 9, 1694, is recorded in Bristol County Register of Probate Office, vol. 1, page 139.

RICHARD WARREN, 15—1628, the father of Sarah Warren Cooke, was not of the Leyden Company. He came from London to join the Pilgrim band, and was one of the signers of the immortal compact framed in the cabin of the Mayflower, which converted an obscure band of adventurers into the founders of a mighty commonwealth. Morton, in his New England Memorial, prints his name as twelfth in the list of signers, and Prince, in his New England Chronology, adds the honorable prefix "Mr." from the register at the end of Bradford's folio manuscript. He was one of the third exploring party which was surprised by the Indians on December 18, 1620, at the spot since known as the scene of "The First Encounter." Technically speaking, he was one of the first to land in Plymouth, December 21, 1620, on what may be called the birthday of New England.

"Under the land division of 1623, his apportionment as one of the Mayflower passengers, fell in the north side of the town, with William White, Edward Winslow, John Goodman, John Cruckston, John Alden, Marie Chilton, Capt. Miles Standish, Francis Eaton, Henry Thompson, and Hamiltie Cooper. In the apportionment to those who came in the Ann, his lands were on the other side of the town, toward Eele River, in the section later known as Wellingsly." He also owned land along the shore of the present Warren's Cove. His house was on his Eele River lands, and it was there that he died in 1628.

"A contemporaneous authority describes him as grave Richard Warren, a man of integrity, justice and uprightness, of piety and serious religion, and as a useful instrument during the short time he lived, bearing a deep share in the difficulties and troubles of the plantation."

ELIZABETH, the wife of Richard Warren, the mother of Sarah Warren Cooke, was married in England, and, accompanied by her daughters, followed her husband to Plymouth in the Ann in 1623. Mrs. Warren was rated in the Plymouth tax list of 1632-3, and was one of the first purchasers at Dartsmouth. A study of the early Plymouth records leads to the conclusion that she was a woman of force and social position in the community, and she is therein spoken of as Mistress Elizabeth Warren, a designation by no means common. Hers was, among the colonists, an unusual case of continued widowhood. A glimpse of one side of her domestic life is to be had in connection with the prosecution by the General Court of her servant, Thomas Williams, July 5, 1635, for "speaking profane and blasphemous speeches against ye masjestie of God." "There being," say the records, "some dissention between him and the dame, she, after other things, exhorting him to fear God and do his duty." Mrs. Warren, after the marriage of her daughters, conveyed to their respective husbands certain lands variously located at Eele River and Wellingsly. She died at Plymouth, October 2, 1673, aged about 90 years.

John Cooke and his wife Sarah Warren were the parents of:

Sarah Cooke, ELIZABETH COOKE, Esther Cooke, Mercy Cooke, Mary Cooke,

ELIZABETH COOKE, 164—-1715, daughter of John Cooke and his wife Sarah Warren, was married November 28, 1661, to Daniel Wilcox, of Portsmouth, R. I., Dartsmouth, Mass., and Tiverton, R. I. His will, dated June 9, 1702, and proven on August 25th following, mentions his wife Elizabeth and their eight children, viz:

Daniel Wilcox,
Samuel Wilcox,
Edward Wilcox,
MARY WILCOX, wife of John Earle (2),
Thomas Wilcox,
Susanna Wilcox,
Lydia Wilcox, and
Sarah Wilcox, wife of Edward Briggs.

JOHN EARLL, colonist, father of John Earll, 2nd, was born in England in 1639, and came from London to Boston in the ship "Speedwell," in 1656. After a short sojourn in Boston, he became a resident of Northampton, Mass. There. on March 24, 1663, he was married to Mary Webb, oldest daughter of John and Ann Webb. For about thirteen years after the date of their marriage John and Mary Webb Earll resided at Northampton. During that period at least five children were born to them, including two sons, named respectively, Noah and John. On the night of March 13th, 1676, when King Philip's war was at its height, a considerable body of hostile Indians surrounded Northampton, and, under cover of the darkness, made openings in the palisade which the inhabitants had constructed about the settlement. At early dawn on the 14th they rushed in and set fire to ten dwellings and murdered five persons, including Mary, the wife of John Earll, before the sleeping garrison had time to rally and repulse them. Soon after this startling event John Earll removed with his children to Southampton, Long Island, N. Y. There, in November, 1678, he was married to his second wife, Mary Raynor, daughter of Thomas Raynor, of that settlement. At Southampton, L. I., John Earll acquired considerable real estate, and at one period was rated also for land in the adjoining town of East Hampton.

RICHARD WEBB, colonist, grandfather of Mary Webb, first wife of John Earll, colonist, was of the Braintree Company of Pilgrims which came to Newtown—now Cambridge—Mass., in 1633, with Rev. Thomas Hooker. In 1636 Richard Webb migrated with that worthy from Newtown to Hartford, Conn.—a memorable journey, of which Dr. Trumble gives the following interesting account:

"About the beginning of June, 1636, Mr. Hooker and about 100 men, women, and children took their departure from Newtown and traveled more than a hundred miles through a hideous wilderness to Hartford. They made their journey over mountains, through swamps, thickets, and rivers which were not passable but with great difficulty.

They had no cover but the heavens, nor any lodgings but those that simple nature afforded them. They drove with them 160 head of cattle and carried their packs and some utensils. This adventure was the more remarkable, as many of the company were persons of figure, who had lived in England in honor, affluence and delicacy, and were entire strangers to fatigue and danger."

In the centre of the ancient bural ground at Hartford, Conn., there stands a monument erected about half a century ago to the memory of the founders of that city. Among the honored names inscribed thereon is that of Richard Webb. The Hartford Quarterly, in a recent issue, refering to this monument and the names it contains, says: "These names represent the fountain head of most of the pure streams which have carried American national principles to the farthermost regions of this country."

JOHN WEBB, son of Richard Weeb and his wife Ann, resided at Hartford for several years. His daughter Mary was born there just 15 years and 47 days prior to the date of her marriage to John Earll, at Northampton, Mass.

JOHN EARLL, 2nd, of Southampton, L. I., son of John Earll, colonist, and his wife Mary Webb, was married to Mary Wilcox, daughter of Daniel Wilcox and his wife Elizabeth Cooke. He resided on his Southampton estate, a considerable portion of which he inherited from his father, until 1730, when he removed to and became a permanent resident of New York City.

John Earll, 3d, son of John Earll, 2nd, and his wife Mary Wilcox, went from his home at Southampton, L. I., to New York City when a young man, and was already married and settled in business as a glazier, or importer and dealer in glass, when his father took up his permanent residence there in 1730. There is in the Orange County Clerk's office at Goshen, N. Y., record of a deed, dated April 3d, 1747, by which "John Earll, of New York City, and Abigail, his wife," convey to one John Brush a certain tract of land, bounded in part by "Quaspeeck Pond in Orange County." Quaspeeck is given as the Indian name of the sheet of water now known as Rockland Lake, in the present County of Rockland.

JOHN EARLL, 4th, son of John Earll, glazier, and his wife Abigail, is the last of the four common ancestors named John of the Earll family, of Orange County, N. Y. He was married in New York City to RACHEL ADAMS, a devout and comely Ouakeress. It is uncertain at just what date he and his family became permanent residents of Orange County. Records in the County Clerk's office show that on the 26th day of June, 1762, he purchased from Thomas Smith, for the sum of £1633, 10 shillings, 857 acres of land, covering the present site of the Village of Highland Mills. the hamlet of Woodbury Falls, and all but the most southerly portion of the attractive sheet of water now known as Cromwell Lake. The county records also show that on July 28, 1774, he purchased from the heirs of William Smith, Esq., an adjoining tract containing 750 acres, beside several smaller farms, so that a few years previous to his death, which occurred in 1786, his total holdings in the present town of Woodbury exceeded 2,000 acres, or over three square miles.

It is recited in the deed first mentioned that John Earll was, at the date of purchase, viz., June 26, 1762, residing in a house on the premises. This house was beyond question the first dwelling of any pretentions as to architectural style erected within the limits of the present town of Woodbury. It was built about the year 1730 for the patentee, Nathaniel Hazard, Sr., merchant of New York City. In 1742 Hazard sold it, together with 437 acres of adjacent land to Thomas Smith, Jr., from whom it passed, in 1762, as previously stated, to John Earll, 4th. This building, referred to at different periods in ancient records as the Hazard, the Smith, and the Earll house, stood on the King's Highway leading from Newburgh to the Jerseys. Its exact location would seem to have been in the centre of the lawn just north of the spacious and modern residence of Charles Henry Townsend, in the Village of Highland Mills.

John Earll, 4th, like many other holders of large tracts of land in sparsely settled sections of the country, at that period, was soon constrained to open this old house as a hostelry for the accommodation of travelers. During the Revolutionary war is was the scene of some stirring events.

At the outbreak of the war John Earll, 4th, and his Quaker wife had two married daughters, and seven stalwart sons, named respectively. Peter, John, Jr., Jonathan, Samuel, Richard, Benjamin and Ezra. The names of all of these sons but Ezra appear with that of their father in the list of signers of the Revolutionary Pledge in 1775; while that of Ezra and all of his brothers but Peter are found recorded in official records of soldiers of Woodbury Clove, who served in the ranks of the Revolutionary army. It is a matter of record too that this John Earl and his seven sons were among the patriots of that historic region most feared and hated by the notorious outlaw, Claudius Smith, and his cowboys of the Ramapo, as well as by their loyalist allies.

On one occasion when the house of John Earll was left for a short time unguarded, word was secretly carried by a Tory neighbor to the outlaw leader, who, at the head of a hastily gathered band of his followers, swooped down on it at night and carried off a large amount of "booty," including a fine young horse, some home-made cloth and 300 guineas. This robbery was one of the crimes for which Claudius Smith and several of his gang were indicted, convicted and hung at Goshen a few months later.

According to family tradition General Washington and his staff were on several occasions entertained at the above mentioned hostelry of John Earll. Lieut.-Colonel Aaron Burr, too, was a frequent visitor there during the several months he and his regiment were performing special scout duty in the Valley of the Ramapo and adjacent country.

This, John Earll's, will is dated May 21, 1781. It was probated in 1786, and reads as follows:

IN THE NAME OF GOD, AMEN, I, John Earll, of Smith's Clove in the Pricinct of Cornwel in the County of Orange and State of New York, being weak in body but sound in mind and memory, do make this my last will and testament in manner and form following: First of all I give and bequeath unto my beloved wife the income of the one-third of my whole estate whilst she remains my widow. I also give and bequeath unto my daughter Elizabeth, her heirs and assigns forever one hundred acres of land to be laid out on the east end of a tract of one hundred and fifty acres which I purchased of her husband James Lewis. I also give and bequeath unto my son John twenty shillings. I also give and bequeath unto my son Samuel his heirs and assigns forever fifty acres of land to be run out on the southwest corner of my farm including the tract I purchased of Isaac Cronkite, excepting and always reserving the main stream of water with as much land adjoining as shall be thought necessary or useful for the use of the Grist Mill or any other mill or mills that may be built in future. I also give and bequeath unto my son Richard his heirs and assigns forever fifty acres of land to be laid out on the west end of a tract above described 1 purchased from Tames Lewis. I also give and bequeath unto my son Benjamin his heirs and assigns forever two hundred acres of land to include the tract or possession he now lives on and to bound to the westward on land of John Rumsey, to the northward on land lately granted to my son Richard and above bequeathed to my daughter Elizabeth and to my said son Richard, easterly on land of William Thorn and to extend so far southward as will contain the two hundred acres within a line to be run parrellel to the southermost line of the tract above bequeathed said James Lewis and Richard

Earll. I also give and bequeath unto my son Peter his heirs and assigns forever ninety acres of land to adjoin southwestward on the land bequeathed to my said son Saml, and westward of the land of John Rumsey and to the northward on the land bequeathed to my said son Benjamin and to extend so far eastward as shall make up the said ninety acres. I also give and bequeath unto my son Ezra his heirs and assigns forever all my lands and tennaments lying southwesterly from a line extending from a stake and heap of stones standing by the brook near the middle lengthways of a small piece of land I bargained for late of Arthur Youmans westerly to the public highway near the easterly side of a high nole to a stake and heap of stones, and on the southeasterly side of the road together with the remained of my land (not above bequeathed) on the westerly side of the publie highway and on the south of a tract adjoining belonging to William Thorn and called his Reed lot. I also give and bequeath unto my son Jonathan all my remaining lands to the northeast of the lands bequeathed to my son Ezrea on both sides of the road to him his heirs and assigns forever. It is also my will that my said son Ezrea should one year after my decease pay unto my two grandchildren Joseph and Mary Holloway the sum of twenty pounds each equal to wheat at six shillings per bushel, to pay unto William Thorn the contents of his bond which I gave him for ve half of the Grist Mill, and further, to pay out of my moveable estate with my notes and bonds included, all my other just debts, and that the remainder shall be divided equally amongst my children their heirs and assigns forever, and I do hereby nominate and appoint Jesse Woodhull, Esq., Beniamin. Peter and Ezrea, my three sons, to be my sole executors for fullfiling this my last will and testament, hereby revoking all former Wills by me made heretofore. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and real this 25 day of May, 1781. John Earll (L. S.). Sealed and signed in the presence of John Weygant, John White, Wm. Thorn. EZRA EARLL, son of John Earll, 4th, and his wife Rachel Adams, was born prior to the year 1750, and was married about the year 1770 to MARY SABIN. He was by occupation a farmer, and, as shown by records in the offices of the County Clerk and Surrogate, a man of affairs in his town. By provisions contained in the will of his father be came into possession of about 400 acres of land, together with the sheet of water then called Hazard's Pond, but later Rumsey's Pond, and now known as Cromwell's Lake.

At one period Ezra Earll is said to have lived near the lake, but during the latter part of his life he resided in the house in the village now occupied by Theodore Weygant, one of his great grandsons. It was in this house that Ezra Earll died, without a will, in the year 1806, leaving surviving him his wife and three married daughters.

WILLIAM SABIN, the great-great-grandfather of Mary Sabin, wife of Ezra Earll, was of French descent. During the latter years of his life he was a resident of Rehoboth, Mass. His parents were wealthy and cultured Huguenots, who fled from France, their native land, during the days of religious persecution which immediately preceded the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. The family, having secured a safe passage across the channel, settled in England near the border line of Wales.

This William Sabin came from England to America about the year 1640. The records of Rehoboth, Mass., show that he was one of a company that founded that town in 1643, and that he resided there for a quarter of a century. These old records also show that he was financially one of the foremost men of the settlement, and that he gave liberally of his means for the relief of his less fortunate neighbors, especially such as suffered from the ravages of the Indians. He was a leading spirit in matters relating to the church and schools, as well as in all such civil affairs as tended to the general betterment of Plymouth colony. His first wife, of whose family name his descendants are uninformed, died in 1660. On Dec. 22, 1663, he was married to Martha Allen, daughter of James and Ann Allen, of Medfield, Mass. His death occurred in the year 1687. His will, the original of which is on file in Boston, is dated June 4, 1685, and was probated July 7, 1687. In it he mentions sixteen of his twenty children.

Benjamin Sabin, son of above mentioned William Sabin, was born May 3, 1646. He resided at Rehoboth until 1675, when he removed to Roxbury. Mass. He was one of the thirteen pioneers who settled Woodstock, Conn., in 1686. During the same year he joined with several others in the purchase of a large tract of land, lying just north of Woodstock, which is the site of the present town of Pomfret. He was married, first, to Sarah Polly, daughter of John and Rebecca Polly, of Roxbury, Mass., who was born June 2, 1650. On July 5, 1678, he was married to his second wife, Sarah Parker, who died June 22, 1717. John Polly mentions in his will "the four motherless children of our daughter Sabin," and provides that they have their mother's share of his estate. Benjamin Sabin died at Pomfret, July 21, 1727, aged 80 years.

In several reports made by Richard, the Earl of Belmont, Governor of the Colony of New York, to the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations, in 1699, he refers to important information received from Benjamin Sabin and Rev. Mr. Dwight of Woodstock. Conn., concerning a contemplated Indian uprising, which they claimed was "being stirred up by the Governor of Canada and his Jesuits."

EBENEZER SABIN, son of Benjamin and his first wife Sarah Polly, was born at Rehoboth, Mass., Dec. 10, 1671. He was married in 1695, to Susana——?, who was admitted to full communion in the church at Roxbury in June, 1696. In the year 1700 he was an ensign in an expedition against Canada, and died at his home in Woodstock, Conn., Sept. 18, 1739.

Joshua Sabin, son of Ebenezer and his wife Susana, was born May 26, 1706. On January 22, 1734, he was married to Mary Polly, a distant relative, whose parents were natives of France. He resided at or near Pomfret, Conn., the greater part of his life, but shortly before the date of his death, removed to New Lebanon Springs, N. Y. He held a commission in General Braddock's army and was killed in the disastrous defeat that overtook that brave but ill-starred commander and his army on the banks of the Monongahela in June, 1755.

MARY SABIN, youngest daughter of Joshua and Mary Polly Sabin, and wife of Ezra Earll, was born May 29, 1753, at New Lebanon Springs, N. Y., and died at the home of her granddaughter, Elizabeth Hoag, near the village of Highland Mills, Orange County, N. Y., at 2 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, Oct. 27, 1846.

Over a quarter of a century ago Mrs. Elizabeth Hoag made to the writer the following interesting statement which he jotted down in a pocket memorandum book which now lies open before him:

"Grandmother Earll lived with me the last few years of her life. She was very fond of dress and would not go out anywhere unless she was dressed just so. Her father, she used to tell me, was killed in Braddock's defeat, when she was but two years old. A year or so later her mother died and she went with her grandmother to live. There were three sets of orphans there, all grandchildren. When she was quite a girl her grandmother used to show her heavy silks and fine things, which she said had been sent to the family from France when her father and mother were alive. Grandmother used to talk of some damask silk which was saved and made up for her when she was grown. She had a brother named Joshua."
